What is Anxiety?

Anxiety is a common mental health condition that affects your thoughts, emotions, and physical well-being. It is more than just feeling stressed or worried for a short amount of time. When anxiety appears frequently and becomes intense, it can make everyday situations feel overwhelming and difficult to manage. Anxiety can show up as excessive worry, restlessness, overthinking, or physical symptoms like a racing heartbeat and difficulty relaxing. In Kerala, it is often described as "tension" or "overthinking," but it is a recognised medical condition, not a personal weakness. Clinically, anxiety disorders are classified under ICD-10 codes F40–F41. With the right support, therapy, and coping strategies, anxiety can be effectively managed.

Mind
Your mind stays busy, with either racing thoughts or repetitive thinking, making it hard for you to concentrate or relax.

Emotions
You experience feelings of fear, worry, or tension always, even if situation that do not cause fear or worry in other people.

Energy
You may be exhausted from having to deal with the constant feelings of fear, worry, or tension throughout the day.

Life
These symptoms could have an effect on many aspects of your life, such as work, sleep, and relationships.
